

Pressure tactics Show your true colours!

After the overwhelming vote in favour of pressure tactics at the roaming general meeting held over the past few weeks, we will launch a visibility campaign in our workplaces on Monday, March 14 to support our bargaining committee.

Starting Monday, STTRC-CSN members who are currently working from home are strongly encouraged to use the Parce que Radio-Canada, c'est nous background during videoconference working sessions and virtual internal meetings. You can download it from: <https://www.ssrc.qc.ca/wp-content/uploads/2022/03/FondEcranSTTRC.jpg>

Is your background backwards? Not to worry, it's normal: it only looks backwards to you, because you are facing the camera. Everyone else on the call will see it the right way.

External means of communication, such as Facebook banners and email signatures, are being reserved for phase 2.

We haven't forgotten about employees working at CBC / Radio-Canada premises. You will also have a chance to show your colours in the workplace. Starting next week, the mobilization officers at our various

(continued on page 2)

There are some cases in which you shouldn't follow the example of our bargaining committee. They couldn't wait until Monday so they jumped the gun and displayed their Parce que Radio-Canada, c'est nous background during yesterday's bargaining session. At the bottom centre of the photo, you can see the three vertical dots you have to click on to bring up the "Apply visual effects" command and display a personal background. For technical support, see the Google Meet help centre at: <https://support.google.com/meethardware/answer/6386665?hl=en#> sections and stations will be putting up posters supporting our bargaining demands and expressing our dissatisfaction with management's offers. Stickers for personal use will also be distributed to all union members. For now, they are intended to be placed on agendas, notebooks, laptops or phones, as you wish.

In the coming weeks, we will receive other items publicizing our demands, such as Thermos cups, reusable water bottles, and caps, in sufficient but not excessive quantities. STTRC-CSN members will be able to take their pick.

Obviously, our bargaining committee needs visible support from the membership. After a very strong turnout at the general meetings, where many members expressed their dissatisfaction with management's attitude, it is time to make management understand that we are serious about getting better working conditions at CBC / Radio-Canada. A weak response from members would send the opposite message.

Meanwhile, we were back at the bargaining table after spring break. We will inform you of the latest developments early next week.

